

Industrial Chemistry

June 27-28, 2016 New Orleans, Louisiana, USA

'LVFRYHU\ DQG GHYHORSPHQW RI V\QWKHWLF WULF\FOLF S
cancer therapy

6DGDQDQGDQ (9HOX
University of Alabama at Birmingham, USA

Marine natural products have established themselves as an important source of novel chemical entities that are unlikely to be found in the terrestrial environment. For the past half century, global marine sources have proven to be a rich source of a vast array of new medicinally valuable compounds. In the recent past, there has been an increase in the number of anticancer alkaloids isolated from marine sources, with sponges being an abundant source of chemically and biologically diverse natural

Notes: