

18th International Conference on

&

August 29-30, 2018 | Toronto, Canada

Metabolomics plays an important role in discovering potential disease biomarkers from blood plasma or serum samples. Due to the distinctive complexity of whole blood as the sample matrix, either plasma or serum are used as the primary sample in metabolomics biomarker discovery research. During the transformation of whole blood into plasma or serum
