

Physiotherapy

October 13-15, 2016 Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia

Prevalence of neck pain in laboratory technicians

Heta Patel<sup>1</sup> and Urja Pandya<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup>Uka Tarsadia University, India

<sup>2</sup>K M Patel Institute of Physiotherapy- S P University, India

Aims: To determine the prevalence of neck pain among laboratory technicians. Design: Descriptive study. Setting: Laboratory technicians working in a tertiary care hospital. Participants: 120 laboratory technicians. Results: The prevalence of neck pain was 82.5%. The most common type of neck pain was chronic (82.5%). The most common location of neck pain was the upper neck (82.5%). The most common duration of neck pain was 6 months (82.5%).

Conclusion: Neck pain is a common problem among laboratory technicians. The prevalence of neck pain was 82.5%. The most common type of neck pain was chronic (82.5%). The most common location of neck pain was the upper neck (82.5%). The most common duration of neck pain was 6 months (82.5%).

Notes: