

Recently, as a result of the development of technology, many areas of education and the provision

The recent spread of COVID-19 around the world has forced attention to online methods of service delivery, telemedicine and medical education using remote sensing methods.

Thus, the use of remote technologies will ensure increased accessibility of healthcare services for the population, income regBT3P16C16Shp