

Evidence shows that chemical fertilizers used in agriculture have high levels of nitrate. These agricultural products consumed by livestock are the most important source of nitrate. The contamination of surface and underground water with nitrate in some agricultural and urban areas has turned into a considerable environmental problem. Type-IV collagen is found primarily in the base membrane and is significantly vital for the performance of this