

promising evidence suggests a multimodal approach including diet, physical activity, cognitive training and monitoring vascular risk may maintain and improve cognitive function during older age [13].

References