

Ophthalmological evaluation in children is very difficult when they present an ocular pathology such as: Corneal opacity, dysgenesis of the anterior segment, among others. Ultrasound imaging is valuable in eyes with opaque media to detect pathological changes of the posterior segment, but ultrasound bio microscopy has been used widely to analyse corneal diseases