

Schachtman TR<sup>1*</sup> and Calton JL<sup>2</sup>

Abstract

Opponent-process theory describes the responses to drugs during exposure. It defines the processes that contribute to the pain of accidental overdose. Moreover, Siegel and many others have provided considerable evidence showing the influence of environmental cues (which are long healed); instead, the pain is due to these associative effects. These processes likely contribute to the

Despite their discovery decades ago, there are well-established,

---

*Corresponding author:

Received:

Revised:

Reviewed:

Editor assigned:

Published:

Citation:

Environmental Cues Influence Drug Responses, Pain, and Opioid Abuse

Citation:

(2022) Opponent-Process Theory Predicts Environmental Cues Influence Drug Responses, Pain, and Opioid

---