

Compared to the general population the burden of chronic diseases such as obesity, hypertension, type II diabetes and stroke are higher among BME populations [4]. Using BMI as measure, findings suggest that, compared to general population (23% men and 23% women), obesity prevalence appears to be higher among Black African (38%),