

Salivendra Suhasini*

Department of Biotechnology, Bhopal University, Madhya Pradesh, India

Keywords: Psychological; Trauma; Medicine

Commentary

Trauma is defined as its response to anxiety, distressing or disturbing event that occur in individual's ability to cope, causes feelings of helplessness, diminishes their sense of self and their ability to feel a full range of emotions and experiences.

Consistently the number of cases is increasing and many people have lost their life the age of 75 and the facing problems the age of 45, as indicated by a position paper by the National Academies of Sciences, Engineering and Medicine and the Committee on Military Trauma Care. According to details that 20% of U.S. passing's from injury in 2014 may have been preventable with ideal injury care-the kind of care gave by injury medical caretakers.

The patient condition may have sporadic or very undesirable fundamental signs. Basic consideration attendants, additionally called injury medical caretakers or ICU attendants have similar essential obligations and duties as customary sta RNs but on the other hand are liable for intently observing patients recuperating from genuine ailment or injury. What's more, in crisis drug circumstances, injury attendants are for the most part among the principal medical care experts to give clinical help.

Patients in the ICU or other crisis care setting. Work cooperatively with the going to doctors and careful inhabitants to guarantee congruity of care to injury and general a medical procedure patients to Help plan, execute and assess medical care therapies, Perform an assortment of strategies on patients every day (checking quiet advancement, aiding wound consideration, giving patient and family training, and so forth), Work intimately with caseworkers, social specialists and monetary guides to help arrange the release cycle, Function as contact for the injury facilitator, research medical caretakers, bedside attendants and subordinate sta connected to the patient and Provide development with ICU patients a er release (e.g., wound consideration)

Psychological trauma is a condition when mind is damaged occurs as a result of a mental health and distressing. Trauma is often the result of an overwhelming amount of stress that exceeds one's ability to cope or integrate the emotions involved with that experience. Trauma may result from a single distressing experience or recurring events of being overwhelmed that can be precipitated in weeks, years, or even decades as the person struggles to cope with the immediate circumstances, eventually leading to serious, long-term negative consequences.

Corresponding author: Salivendra Suhasini, Department of Biotechnology, Bhopal University, Madhya Pradesh, India, E-mail: salivendra_suhasini@rediffmail.com

Received December 01, 2020; Accepted December 10, 2020; Published December 17, 2020

Citation: Suhasini S (2020) Role of Nursing in Trauma Care. J Comm Pub Health Nursing 6: 260.

Copyright: © 2020 Suhasini S. This is an open-access article distributed under the terms of the Creative Commons Attribution License, which permits unrestricted use, distribution, and reproduction in any medium, provided the original author and source are credited.