

The Importance of Individualized Pain Assessment for Improving Patient's Quality of Life

Department of Laboratory Medicine, Lund University, Lund, Sweden

Karin Gomes, Department of Laboratory Medicine, Lund University, Lund, Sweden, E-mail: kargom@LU.se

27-May-2024, Manuscript No. JPCM-24-144666;
JPCM-24-144666;

20-Jun-2024, Manuscript No. JPCM-24-144666 (R);

30-May-2024, PreQc No. JPCM-24-144666 (PQ);

13-Jun-2024, QC No.

evaluation is a fundamental component of palliative care. It helps medical professionals to understand and treat the complex, multidimensional aspects of pain, which enhances patient outcomes and quality of life. Considering the difficulties, a methodical and comprehensive approach to assessing pain can result in important improvements in the treatment of pain.