As the journal is starting its new journey, I would like to wish it good luck and success. The journal has a long and rich history, and I am confident that it will continue to be a leading journal in its field. I hope that the new editorial board will bring fresh perspectives and ideas to the journal, and that the journal will continue to be a platform for high-quality research and scholarship. I am sure that the journal will continue to be a valuable resource for researchers and students alike.
