

Functionally Graded Tungsten Carbide Produced by Carburizing Method

Peng Fan*

Department of Metallurgical Engineering, University of Utah, USA

PengFan@utah.edu

Rec date:

Acc date:

Pub date:

Copyright:

Cemented tungsten carbide (WC-Co) is an indispensable material used in many manufacturing sectors including metalworking, oil and gas drilling, geothermal energy exploration, mining, construction,

-
2. Fan F, Eso O, Fang ZZ, Sohn HY (2008) Effect of WC particle size on Co distribution in liquid-phase-sintered functionally graded WC-Co composite. Int J Refract Met Hard Mater 26: 98-105.
 3. Fan P, Guo J, Fang ZZ, Prichard P (2009) Effects of liquid-phase composition on its migration during liquid-phase sintering of cemented carbide. Metall Mater Trans A 40A: 1995-2006.
 4. Fan P, Fang ZZ, Guo J (2013) A review of liquid phase migration and methods for fabrication of functionally graded cemented tungsten carbide. Int J Refract Met Hard Mater 36: 2-9.
 5. Fang ZZ, Fan P, Guo J (2012) Functionally graded cemented tungsten carbide with engineered hard surface. U.S. Pat. 8163232.
 6. Fang ZZ, Fan P, Guo J (2011) Functionally graded cemented tungsten carbide with engineered hard surface. U.S. Pat. Appl., Pub. No. 20110116963.
 7. Guo J, Fan P, Wang X, Fang ZZ (2011) A novel approach for manufacturing functionally graded cemented tungsten carbide composites. Int J Powder Metall 47: 55-62.
 8. Guo J, Fang ZZ, Fan P, Wang X (2011) Kinetics of the formation of metal binder gradient in WC-Co by carbon diffusion induced liquid migration. Acta Mater 59: 4719-4731.